

Source: <http://www.csmonitor.com>

A Nepalese woman removes bricks of a damaged house to make way for pedestrians after an earthquake in Katmandu, Nepal, on Sept. 19. A 6.9 magnitude earthquake shook the Himalayan region of India, and Nepal, and Tibet on Sept. 18, killing at least 16 people, damaging buildings, and sending lawmakers in Nepal's capital running into the streets.

Source: <http://www.csmonitor.com>

Nepalese police look for victims in a house that collapsed during an earthquake in Bhaktapur, Nepal, on Sept. 19.

Source: <http://www.csmonitor.com>

People walk past collapsed buildings damaged by an earthquake in Katmandu, Nepal, on Sept. 19.

Source: <http://www.csmonitor.com>

Nepalese people take out a motorbike buried under the debris of a house damaged by the earthquake in Bhaktapur, Nepal, on Sept. 19.

Source: <http://www.csmonitor.com>

A man points out the crack of a house damaged by the earthquake in Katmandu, Nepal, on Sept. 19.

Source: <http://www.csmonitor.com>

Nepalese locals along with policemen stand near collapsed buildings damaged by the earthquake in Katmandu, Nepal, on Sept. 19.

Source: <http://www.csmonitor.com>

Nepalese children and other people stand near the debris of collapsed buildings damaged by the earthquake in Katmandu, Nepal, on Sept. 19.

Source: <http://www.csmonitor.com>

A man looks on from a damaged house after an earthquake in Bhaktapur, on the outskirts of Katmandu, Nepal, on Sept. 18.

Source: <http://www.csmonitor.com>

A Nepalese policeman searches for casualties in the ruins of a quake-damaged house at Lokanthali in Bhaktapur, Nepal, on Sept. 19.

Source: <http://www.csmonitor.com>

A Nepalese woman with her daughter looks out of a window at debris of collapsed buildings damaged by an earthquake in Katmandu, Nepal, on Sept. 19.